

The Civil War

The North

The North (Union) - Abraham Lincoln (President) and Ulysses S. Grant (Military General) were leaders of the North, or the Union, during the Civil war. They were fighting to end the practice of slavery. The North won the war and slavery was outlawed.

The South

The South (Confederacy) - Jefferson Davis (President) and Robert E. Lee (Military General) were leaders of the South, or the Confederacy, during the Civil War. They were fighting to keep slavery because the economy of the south relied on slavery.
